

Tisser

hand to heart

a journey towards empowerment

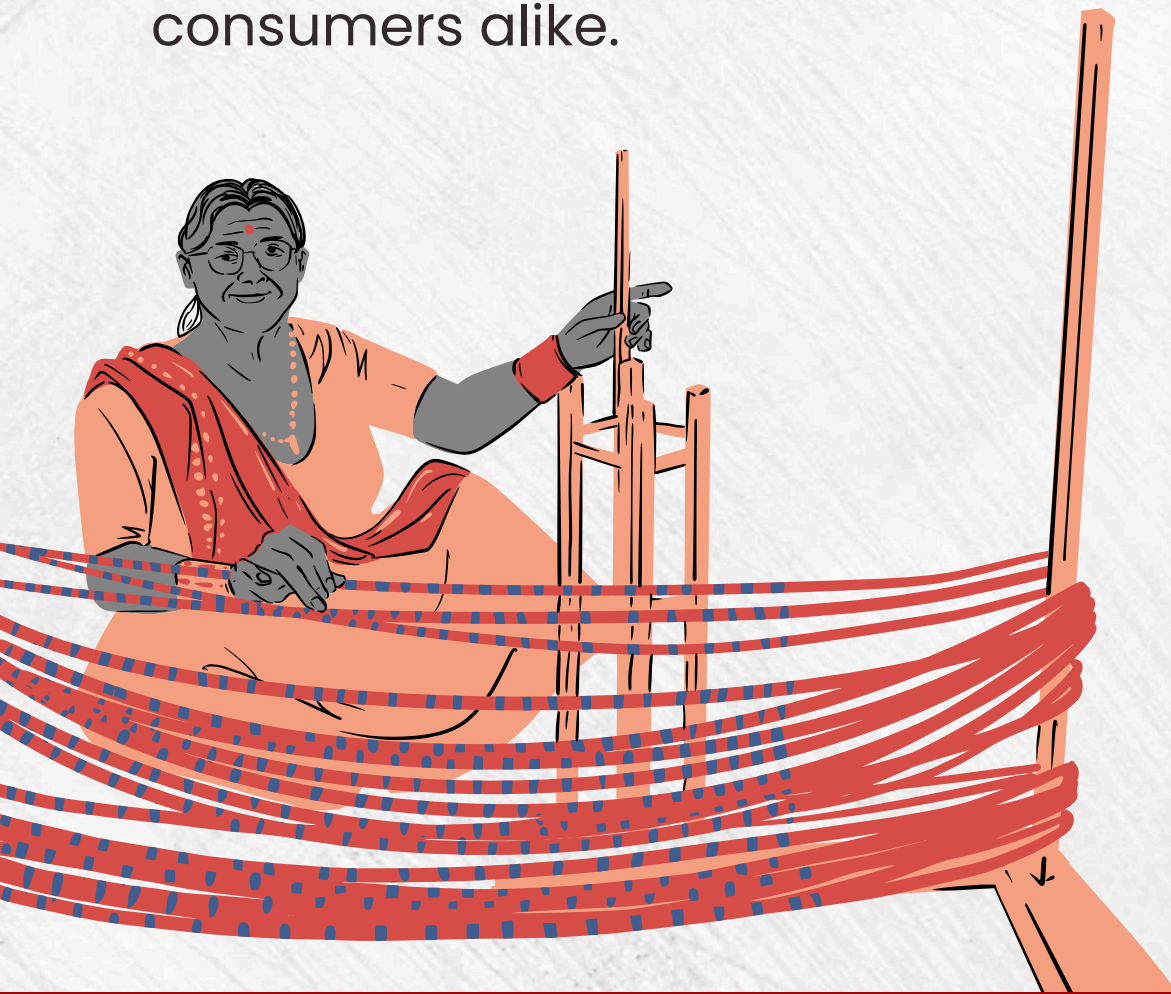

Tisser, which translates to "weave" in French, is a community-driven platform that connects over 10,000 artisans in India across 100+ rural clusters. The artisans specialize in a diverse range of craft forms like Madhubani, Warli, Kalamkari, and more. Tisser has developed a 360-degree operational model, encompassing cluster development, design intervention, regional outreach hubs, and product diversification. This structure includes partnerships with organizations like UNDP and local agencies to build self-sustaining craft communities.

Tisser India facilitates the production, design, and sale of handmade products that include apparel, home décor, accessories, and fine art. Their marketplace highlights the unique artistry of rural India while enabling consumers to participate in the “vocal for local” movement. Through their e-commerce platform, Tisser offers products directly from the artisans to the global market, promoting both social and economic impact. Each artisan group is trained in market-driven design and quality control to ensure their craft thrives in modern markets. Tisser India exemplifies a social enterprise model that marries cultural heritage with modern business practices, striving for both artistic preservation and economic empowerment. This structure has positioned them as an impactful entity in the Indian craft sector, benefiting artisans and consumers alike.

Purchasing from Tisser promotes ethical consumerism, where every choice benefits both the planet and its people.

This festival promotes and sustains artisan livelihoods.
